One Thousand Cases Now Under Treatment in New York.

A dispatch from New York says: "Just when we had reached the normal death rate for the first time in a year this kind of weather sets in," said Health Commissioner Darlington, wiping the prespiration from his forehead yesterday and shaking his head despondently. WILL LAST TWO DAYS

TEN COMPANIES WILL PARTICI-PATE AT BASE BALL PARK.

Closest Contest in Years Expected-Rosters of Companies That Drill for Honors.

Owing to the condition of the weather this afternoon the competitive drill of the High School Cadets was postponed.

It is now the intention, the weather permitting, to carry out the program of today tomorrow afternoon, and if the grounds can be secured, the program of Wednesday will be carried out Thursday afternoon. All tickets issued for the two days of the drill will be good for the first and second days under the new arrangement. The seventeenth annual competitive drill will begin at ! o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the American League base ball park, 7th and Florida avenue northwest. It will probably be the most notable event of its kind ever held in the District, since the size of the corps has been increased this year until it is larger than ever before and its efficiency in drill is regarded as being as great, if not greater, than in previous years. So evenly matched are the ten companies that the closest observer, though he be skilled in military tac-tics, is thus far unable to pick a likely

The drill will not be completed until Thursday afternoon. Those companies which will go on the field first are H of Western, F or Eastern and C. D., and K of Technical. They will drill in the order named. Thursday afternoon the remaining five will drill in the following order: A of Central, G of Business, I of Central, B of Certral and E of Business.

The companies are practically all full this year. The strictest attention has been given to practice drills, especially during the past two months since the competitive program was given to the captains. The demonstrated their efficiency on the recent occasion of the annual review and sham battle at the White Lot. In addition to the given program of sixty-seven numbers each captain will have to carry out an impromptu program of about ter numbers. He will receive this on the field from the hands of the judges, after the regular maneuvers have been completed. Company H, the first to go on the field today, was given orders to report at 3:30 o'clock and receive blank cartridges for the firing numbers. The other companies that drill will report at half hour intervals

Large Crowd Expected.

Sixteen thousand five hundred tickets have been issued for the two days, and there is expected to be present a crowd large enough to fill every seat, and every inch of standing room on the grand stand and bleachers.

Each school will occupy a certain portion of the stand, which it has deco-rated with its own colors. As usual the High School girl, decked out in ribbons and carrying a flag, will be more in evidence than any one else, and doubtless she will not fail to cheer for her favorite company with the will she has manifested

With its ten companies the cadet corps is larger this year than ever before. It has three battalions for the first time in its history. The growth of the organiza-tion is regarded as remarkable. Since 1883 it has increased in numbers and efficiency, until today it stands, it is claimed, without a peer among the military organiza-tions of the general schools of the country. In drill it is regarded as ap-proaching very near the degree of perfec-tion attained at West Point and Annapolis, History of Regiment.

The idea of introducing military drill into the Washington High School originated in 1882 with Professor E. A. Paul, then principal, who in October of that year organized two cadet companies, which were placed in charge of Professor Israel, one of the faculty, and a graduate of a Pennsyl-vanta military college. The organization was at first a modest one, only one of the companies being uniformed, the boys who did not possess uniforms being assigned to B company. The equipment for the first year consisted of fifty rifles of ancient pattern secured by funds raised at a concert, and used alternately by the two companies. Major Bates was the first military in-

ANNUAL COMPETITION

Isso four companies were formed, commanded by Major La Egtra. Two more companies were added in 1801, when the Eastern and Business schools separated from the original school and formed companies of their own. Each of these schools increased its strength to two companies a year later, and at the same time the Western High School branched off and formed a new company. This gave a regiment of nine companies, which continued until 1800, when Company I, one of the companies of the Business school, was dropped. Company G was transferred from the Eastern High School to the Business in 1902, while the McKinley Manual Training School, in the Central High School and took with it companies C and D.

Last fall companies I and K, the former of Central and the latter of Technical, were added, bringing the regiment to its present strength of ten companies.

Examinations for Officers. The officers of the regiment obtain their commissions each year through a difficult tactical examination, due credit being given to the cadet's standing in studies. The colonelcy of the regiment, the highest and consequently the most desirable position that can be held by a cadet, is awarded as a result of a special examination conducted by officers of the National Guard. The annual competitive drill has always, since its establishment, been the chief event of the drill year, being approached in im-portance only by the regimental drill and field maneuvers on the White Lot. Competitions between companies were inaugurat-ed in 1888, when Company A, drilling in the ed in 1888, when Company A, drilling in the assembly hall of the Central High School, won the flag which had been presented by the young ladies of the graduating class. Until the year 1893 the competitive drills consisted only of the manual of arms, and were held in one of the local theaters. The present arrangement was introduced in that year, and has continued ever since, the drills taking place in the base ball park, and covering a period of two days. The movements on the program have increased in difficulty from year to year, an innovation being introduced two years ago, when each captain was given a supplemental program entirely unfamiliar to him, which he was requested to work out on the field. This year the same plan will be fol-lowed, the extra programs being longer and more comprehensive more comprehensive

The prize offered for the competition consists of a silk flag, bearing upon its staff sists of a silk flag, bearing upon its staff the colors of the successive winners of the drill. An additional prize was offered in 1895 by Captain Allison Nailor, who presented the regiment with a thousand-dollar gold medal, studded with jewels, which the winning captain is peach year allowed to wear until the close of the school year. Captain Nailor also deposited bonds bearing sufficient interest annually to purchase ing sufficient interest annually to purchase a miniature of the large medal, which becomes the individual property of the suc-cessful captain. During the twenty-two years of its existence the High School Cadet Corps has wo its way by its sheer excellence, until it stands today in the front

Col. Huddleson.

George Herman Huddleson of the Mc-Kinley Manual Training School, colonel of ent home is on Loughborough road, Tenleytown, D. C. Young Huddleson received most of his early education in the local schools. Reaching the point where he was ready to enter the high school, he decided then being taught in the old Central High Van Ness, Company B. The following year he was raised to the rank of corporal and was a member of C Company, under Capt. Charles Tompkins. This command was one of the first to be designated as a "Tech" Company, in distinction from these pared of boys of the Central, who followed he academic and scientific courses.

The corporal had shown such aptitude and enthusiasm in drill, and had besides made such a good showing in his studies that when he passed high in the tactical examination held at the beginning of the school year of 1902-1903 he was given command of C Company, although it is not customary to give a third-year man command of a company.

Capt. Huddleson drilled his men so well that he carried off the prize flag and medal on the competitive drill field last spring, when seven other companies contested his right to the honor. His company was handled so skillfully that no one withheld the decision that he had distanced all, in spit-of the fact that the rivalry was intense and the drilling all very fine.

Last fall the captain of the winning com pary won the crowning success in his high school life, passing highest in a severe ex-amination before a military board, and satisfying them that he was the most capable of all the candidates to command a large body of cadets, as their colonel.

His personal attractiveness and general popularity among the boys of all the high schools have also had much to do with the young colonel's success. He is, besides, an athlete, having a good record as a foot ball player and a runner.

Major Bates was the first military instructor.

Early in the next year company A turned out for the first time, and attracted such attention by its fine appearance that one hundred Springfield cadet rifles were obtained for its use from the War Department. In 1887 Lieutenant Colonel Eurton R. Ross of the District National Guard, then captain in the Washington Light Infantry, succeeded Major Bates, as military instructor.

New companies were quickly added. In National State of the Company of the Colone of Charles Clement and the oldest member of Charles Clement and A dispatch from Rutland, Vt., last night

Anti-Parker New York Democrats to Hold a Convention-Democratic Compromise in Delaware.

A dispatch from Wilmington, Del., last night says: The opening meeting of the republican national campaign was held here tonight in the opera house under the auspices of the Roosevelt Workingmen's Club of Delaware, an organization formed recently, Alfred O. Crozier presided, and the vice presidents included Gov. Hunn, United States Senators Ball and Allee and prominent republicans from all parts of the state. Mr. Crozier made a speech introducing Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, who spoke at considerable length on the issues of the campaign. He said in part:

Taxed for Summer Decoctions. "Waiter, you may bring me a 'hightiddley," said the first young man, mopping his brow as he sank into a chair in the Waldorf-Astoria cafe, in New York, yesterday. "Also, you may aim that electric fan at me. What'll you have?" turning to his companion. "A Hillycraft cooler," was the answer, "and divide the fan so it toucher

It was only a minute later that on the bar appeared bottle after bottle; some round, some square, some large, some small, bottles which had strange labels and bottles with time-worn superscriptions. Behind them a white-jacketed man maneuvered industriously, pouring now from one and now from the other. Four cordials, for instance, went into the "hightiddley," and just how many into the hightiddley, and just how many into the other could not be counted. Besides that there were supplements of cracked ice, much shaking and straining, an addition of fruits and flowers and finally a sigh as the waiter bore of the burden to the expectant customers.
